The jury brought in a verdict of voluntary nauslaughter, and fixed his punishment at four years in the penitentiary. This verdict was reversed by the Court of Appeals, and the case remanded for trial.

Owing to the prominence of the parties, the case attracted more than State-wide attention. Thompson being the associate editor of the Warrenton Virginian, a weekly newspaper published here, and Harris was prominently identified with aducational matters, both in the county and throughout the State. The bond was fençwed and with the same bondsnien as formerly—Joseph A. Jeffries, D. P. Wood, W. U. Parkinson, J. E. Grayson, J. W. Jeffries and A. W. Strother. It is presumed Hon. J. A. C. Hunyadi CHICAGO MEAT IS CHEAPER IN LONDON

Investigator Finds That American Trust Agents Sought Control of Market.

BIG DEAL WAS BLOCKED

British Government Halted Pur chase of Stalls Despite Reduction in Selling Prices.

Philadelphia March 21.—Recent unsuccessful attempts by the Swift, Arimour, Morris and other Western meat packers which appear to be working under a "community of interest" understanding, to secure control of the meat business of London, were told of yesterday by James M. Miller, exconsul-general for the United States in New Zealand, who returned on the American liner Friesland from Liverpool. Mr. Miller has been studying as an expert and his special field of investigation was among the laboring classes of London.

What struck the investigator most forcibly was the economy practiced by the poor and middle class people of England, which he said is in striking contrest with the extravagance that has developed in this country. Over there every article of food and household use is carefully husbanded, and buyers for domestic purposes can be depended upon to get full value for the money they have to spend.

Tried to Buy Market Stalls.

The first move of the meat packing combine to gain courted of the retail meat business of the British metropolis, according to Mr. Miller, was made when agents for Swift, Armour, Morris and the others purchased all the available stalls in the famous Smithfield Market, London, paying what was regarded as fabulgus prices. The deal was blocked, however, by the British government when attention, was called to the efforts of the monopolists.

The stall owners were stopped from transferring their stalls, and the American agents thereupon started a market of their own opposite the Smithfield institution, and when Mr. Miller left England seemed to be doing a thriving business.

When Mr. Miller boarded the Friesland the selling price of American meats in London, he says, was 20 per cont. lower than they were on the same ence to the performance of the "Girl from Rectors," which was presented at a local playhouse several weeks ago.

The chief said: "I told the minister's assembled yesterday of sending out telegrams to Memphis, Jacksonville, Atlanta and other cities, where the show in question had appeared, asking for information with reference to the show in question had appeared in those cities and that the police had not been called upon to take a hand.

"As a matter of precaution I attended the performance of the show in question in Norfolk. I carried with me three of my plain clothes men. and while in the theatre enjoyed the presence of several of our local newspapermen. I explained to the proprietor of the house that nothing vulgar would be allowed, and he assured men that he himself would not countenance such.

"While the show was going on. I was in frequent conference with the committee sent down from Richmond, So far as I can learn this committee gave the performance a clean bill of health, so to speak, up until the time the curtain went down. I have been informed that the report they agreed upon, and carried back to Richmond was made up thirty minutes after the curtain had rung down on the last act of the show."
